HOME AT ONCE.

City of Mexico, Aug. 25.—Diplomatic negotiations between the United States and Mexico, through John Lind as personal representative of President Wilson in Mexico, have been broken off and Mr. Lind has been ordered to return to Washington. He will leave here tomorrow morning for Vera Cruz.

"If I had the power to prophesy, I would tell you what will be the outcome of the matter, but as I have not the power, I do not know what is coming," was Mr. Lind's reply to-night, when asked his opinion regarding the situation.

Women Wearing "Brother's Coat."

The September issue of Woman's Home Companion is an Advance Autumn Fashion Number and contains all the latest information on fall styles. One of the interesting bits of news contributed to this department by Grace Margaret Gould, the Fashion Editor, is the following:

"In the way of a utility coat, there is a new garment known as brother's coat, which is distinctly masculine, even to buttoning just as a man's coat does from left to right. A coat of this sort will be very practical with the one-piece dress, which will continue to be worn throughout the season. There is nothing in which smartness and practical use are more happily combined than the one-piece dress. Just the fact that it is easy to get into commends it to the heart of every woman. It may be absolutely simple or exceedingly elaborate. It may be of any material from plainest serge to richest brocade. Long may it stay in style!"

Commissioners Will Pay Old Claims

For some time past the county commissioners have been wrestling with a problem of how to meet a deficit of about $2,000 in the revenues of the county for the year ending June 30, 1912. It has been finally agreed that the approved claims will be reduced to a judgment and paid from the sinking fund, which fund will be reimbursed by a levy for the purpose extending over three years. This action will afford relief to quite a number who hold claims against the county.

The commissioners have also decided to appoint W. S. Kerr as tax ferret, instead of going outside the county for a man to do this work.

Old-Time Telegraphers Meet.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 26.—Members of the Old-Time Telegraphers' Association and the United States Military Telegraph Corps began a three-day joint reunion in Detroit today. Members of the two organizations from several hundred cities throughout the country are in attendance.

The concluding sessions of the reunion are to be held Thursday at Mt. Clemens. It is expected that Thomas A. Edison, the famous inventor and one of the charter members of the Old-Time Telegraphers, will be present. It was in the railway depot at Mt. Clemens that Mr. Edison began his career as a telegrapher, and it is planned to have him send a message to President Wilson from the same instrument that he used years ago when he was learning the business.

Depredations of Wild Horses in Canada

The Department of Agriculture of the Dominion of Canada has an unusual problem to solve, according to recent reports made by the American consul, Woodward, of Vancouver, in the matter of depredations of wild horses in and near the boundary between British Columbia and the province of Alberta.

During the rush to the Yukon gold fields, fifteen years ago, it was necessary for many of the fortune seekers to abandon their horses after traveling as far north as it was possible to utilize the horse. It is believed that the descendants of those animals so abandoned, constitute the present wild horses of the region. Those animals have raided the ranches of the new settlers of the section named and led away many of the well bred domestic mares of the settlers, and also often killing domestic stock. The damage entailed has been considerable as the cost of the stock imported is considerable and represents one of the principal assets of the new settlers. Again the destruction menaces the settling of the region as steam farming machinery has not as yet reached a profitable basis.

Despite common belief there are still a number of herds of wild horses in the United States—Oregon and Nevada furnishing the greatest number. Several years ago—about twenty—wild horses were found in Eastern Colorado, around the Pawnee buttes. It was a business followed by several citizens of Brush and other towns of eastern Colorado the capturing and taming of those animals.

Several corrals were built in the draws near where the herd lived. Several men and quite a number of domestic horses for relays surrounded the herd and by constant riding in a circle, keeping in sight of the herd all the time, and never permitting them to secure food or water they were driven into corrals. It often took several days to accomplish the capture, depending wholly on the ceaseless vigil of the hunters.

Land Rush Expected.

McAlester, Ok., Aug. 25.—A great "land rush" in which 459,000 acres of land belonging to the Choctaw Indians will be placed on the market, will center about this city early next year. The appraisers of the land are at work and will probably complete their task by Dec. 1.

The territory to be opened to buyers is not frontier land, but virgin soil in civilized communities, and comprises the segregated coal lands of the Choctaws, the surface of which is to be sold, the tribe retaining the coal.

Tom and Clare Davidson have gone to Wichita Falls, Texas. Tom has accepted a position in a meat market at that place.

Pythians Meet at Trinidad.

Trinidad, Colo., Aug. 26.—Three days of interest in Pythian circles were ushered in here today with the opening of the annual grand lodge session of the Uniformed Rank of the Knights of Pythias. Members of the order from all parts of Colorado are in attendance. General Bugdick and his staff arrived in the city this morning and were escorted to the headquarters camp in Central park. This afternoon the great parade took place. The competitive drills will be held tomorrow and on Thursday the gathering will close with the election and installation of the grand lodge officers.

PROGRESS IN TARIFF BILL

WILL REACH VOTE IN SENATE
SOON—FREE LIST COMPLET-ED MONDAY.

Washington, Aug. 25.—Ratification of the free list in the tariff bill, with reservations of a few commodities for later consideration; agreement by democrats of the finance committee to consider an amendment by Senator Kenyon which would automatically transfer trust-controlled articles to the free list; discussion of free print paper and the paper schedule and a lively debate on southern and New England cotton mills enlivened the tariff debate in the senate Monday.

So rapid was the progress in consideration of the free list that democratic leaders were led to predict an early passage of the bill, some insisting it would be ready for a vote by the middle of next week. In the midst of this progress, however, were injected several set speeches which predicted a long colloquy between Senators Lippitt of Rhode Island and Smith of South Carolina over relative conditions in New England and southern cotton mills. This occupied several hours and left the schedules considerably behind for the day.

Free raw wool was among the proposals in the free list approved by senate in committee of the whole, but this will come up again on substitutes offered in the senate proper. Free meat, cattle, sheep, swine and wheat were passed over at the request of Senator McCumber of North Dakota.

Senator Smith of South Carolina, assailing the foreign labor in New England cotton mills and the wages paid, provoked a sectional debate. Senator Lippitt retorting with a description of the child labor in the south and a comparison of wages, showing the southern wages to be lower than those paid in New England cotton mills.

The paper schedule was agreed to as amended by the finance committee with the exception of the paragraph on wrapping paper which was passed over at the suggestion of Senator Hughes, in charge of the schedule.

POULTRY ASSOCIATION CALLED TO MEET

Pontotoc County Poultry Association is hereby called to meet this evening at 8 o'clock at the police judge's office, first floor city hall.

T. O. CULLINS, Pres.

E. W. Hardin has taken over the state agency of the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Co., with headquarters at Oklahoma City. He will leave Tuesday morning and take charge, and his family will follow in about a month. Mr. Hardin and his estimable family have resided here for so long that they seem to be a permanent part of the citizenship of Ada and will be badly missed. Mr. Hardin has always taken a leading part in every movement for the betterment of the town and county and it is with profound regret that the many friends of the family part with them.

He Lives in Ada, Also.

"Bill Snort" lives in North Topeka and doesn't pay his debts. He doesn't make any effort to pay them and has followed that practice for so long that it has become difficult for him to contract a debt among the people who know him.

"You'll have to collect that from 'Bill Snort,'" said a business man to a collector Monday afternoon. The bill collector knew Snort. The others around knew him and everybody laughed. It was a joke.

Bill Snort is a big, strapping man, able to work and make good wages. He has become a joke among his fellows. What chance has he now to brace up and make a success of life even if he wanted to? To all intent and purpose he might just as well be a drunkard or a jointster. He has no standing in the community, he is a joke among his fellows, and all because he doesn't pay his debts.

There is some excuse for the man who strives and is still unable to meet his obligations. Usually there is a way out for him. But what chance has Bill Snort?—Chief, North Topeka, Kansas.

NO DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE ON THE TICKET

Little Rock, Ark., July 7.—Secretary of the State Hodges Saturday night certified the names of three candidates for governor in the special election to be held July 23, this being the last day allowed by law. For the first time in the history of the state there was no democrat in the list, as a result of an injunction prohibiting the certification of the name of George W. Hays, who, on the face of the returns, was nominated at the democratic primary.

Although Mayor Charles E. Taylor of Little Rock had been nominated by petition his name was dropped at his own request.

The candidates certified were: Col. George W. Murphy, progressive; Harry H. Myers, republican; J. Emile Weber, socialist. If the supreme court should dissolve the injunction against Judge Hays this week, an effort will be made to place his name on the ballot.

Bill Murray has not been heard from yet regarding the office he has selected for himself next year. He had better be speaking up for the entries are being made very rapidly now.

Gov. Cruce seems to have overlooked Lieutenant Governor McAlester's kind offer in regard to accompanying him to the conference of governors in Colorado. At all events he has neither gone nor issued any reply to Mr. McAlester's proposition.

The papers tell of Harry Thaw going into a towering rage because his breakfast was not brought to him on schedule time. Harry is getting plenty of notoriety now and that seems to compensate him to a considerable degree for the inconveniences he suffers.

President Wilson has forbidden the shipment of arms to either of the warring factions in Mexico. It occurs to us that it would be more effective to throw down the bars and invite them to help themselves to all they can raise the cash to pay for. The revolution would soon wear itself out if there were plenty of ammunition to shoot.

The rapidly shortening days remind us that summer is nearing an end, although the temperature does not indicate any immediate change. A month hence, however, coats will begin to come into fashion again, and old stoves will receive a coat of polish preparatory to being put to work for the winter.

It is proposed to loan 500 state convicts to counties of Oklahoma for use on the public roads. A wise suggestion, for if reports are true, there is not enough work for the inmates of the pen and there is no reason why they should not be made to pay their way. A little work will be good for them, for it is certainly true that an idle brain is the devil's workshop.

Tulsa was selected as the next meeting place of the state teachers' association, but it was found that adequate quarters could not be secured and the meeting was moved to Muskogee. Tulsa is a fine place for such a meeting and it is to be regretted that the meeting could not be held there.

Some comment has been made on the appointment of several newspaper men to important posts under this administration. Did the critics stop to think that the president has been a writer himself and he knows that they need the money.—Tulsa World.

Not only that, but the president no doubt has a very warm spot in his heart for the boys who whooped it up for him during the campaign. Most candidates take this boosting as a matter of course and forget all about their newspaper friends when they have been once elected.

D. D. Roland of Chickasha was here Monday and today on a visit to his brother, R. C. Roland. Mrs. Roland and children accompanied him home this afternoon and will visit his family a few days. Mr. Roland created some little interest not long ago by smashing a lot of booze in his official capacity. He will make the race for sheriff of Grady county next year and stands a fine chance of election.

Judge W. H. Hammond was down from Francis today. In addition to his duties as justice of Francis township he is the principal-elect of the Francis school. The judge is one of the oldest teachers in point of service in Pontotoc county, having taught here before statehood and most of the time since. He will doubtless give the patrons of the Francis school a successful term.

A large crowd witnessed a good show last night at the Alrdome. The Vanderbilts, Pauline and George are by far the superior of their line. They are contortionists of the first class, threading themselves through impossible nooks and corners, going through hoops that seemed a human impossibility. Will introduce new features this evening.

The Frisco has a large crew at work making improvements in and around the round house.

It is reported here that all of the superintendents of the Frisco system have been called to meet at Springfield September 1st but what is going to be done is not known.

The school will begin in the near future and the school board has elected W. H. Hammond principal.

Bill Primerman, a freight conductor on the north end local was seriously hurt some where about the spine Monday. The accident occurred at a point some where up the line from Francis. He was shipped here to the hotel Richey and on to the hospital at Sherman.

It is thought here by the farmers and business men that the cotton on account of the drouth will be all gathered and marketed by the 15th of October.

The Choctaw Oil Co. is as busy as bees working on their gin and will get it ready to gin this week.

It is reported here by those in position to know that the Frisco is enjoying the largest business that the road has known in its history.

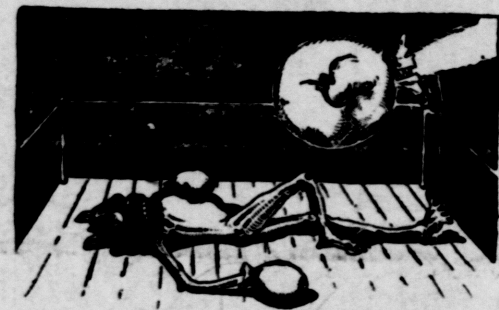

T. J. Cross, editor of the Wigwag, was in Sasakwa Monday looking after the interest of his paper.

James A. Smith a farmer living two miles south of Francis brought in the first bale of cotton Tuesday. Mr. Smith got 4 cents in the seed for his cotton and a premium of $17 made up with more to follow.

Prof. T. F. Pierce and family are moving to Stonewall where they will make their home while he superintends the schools of that place. Although Ada loses a most excellent family that it regrets to see leave, Stonewall is making a gain upon which it is to be congratulated.

There is no need for anyone to be despondent over the illness of blood impurities. ## Governors Will Meet in Conference

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 26.—The sixth annual Conference of Governors assembled here today to enter upon a five days' discussion of public problems of common interest and importance to the entire country. The conference is entirely non-partisan in character. The governors come from all sections of the country and represent all shades of political belief.

Governor McGovern of Wisconsin, Governor O'Neal of Alabama and Governor Ammons of Colorado constitute the executive committee of the conference. Others who are expected to take a prominent part in the present session are Governors Carey of Wyoming, Baldwin of Connecticut, Dunne of Illinois, Hanna of North Dakota, Hodges of Kansas, Lister of Washington, Clarke of Iowa, Haines of Idaho, Major of Missouri and West of Oregon. The conference had its origin in 1908, when President Roosevelt called the governors together at Washington to discuss steps for the conservation of the natural resources of the country. At this initial meeting it was decided to make the conference a permanent body and to hold annual sessions with the object of exchanging views on subjects of general importance, promoting greater uniformity in state legislation, and attaining greater efficiency in the state administration.

Since the meeting in Washington in 1908 the conference has held sessions in Frankfort, Ky., Trenton, N. J., and Richmond, Va. The attendance has increased at each yearly session and at the same time the influence of the conference has broadened. As a safeguard to State's rights, the influence and importance of the conference can hardly be overestimated. In the same way, the conference has a tendency to curb any infringement on these rights by the Federal government by bringing about enactment of legislation in the various States that otherwise might receive the attention of Congress. Heretofore it has seemed easier to amend the Constitution and clothe Congress with certain necessary power than to secure uniform legislation in the States. But the governor's conference, it is believed, will ultimately be able to bring about uniform legislation on marriage and divorce, child labor, rates of interest, and numerous other social problems of pressing importance, thus lessening the tendency to expand the Federal authority.

No fixed program has been prepared for the present conference. Several papers and addresses will be presented, but for the most part the governors will devote the time to an informal discussion of each subject as it is introduced. These subjects will relate largely to the administrative side of State business, such for instance as "The Growth of Administrative Commission," "A State Department of Efficiency and Economy," and "The Cause and Remedy for Popular District of Legislatures."

A subject that has already received considerable attention from the conference and which is scheduled to be taken up for further consideration at the present session is the establishment of rural credit banks, land mortgage societies and co-operative buying and selling associations to meet the needs of the agricultural folk of the United States. By special invitation Senator Fletcher of Florida will deliver an address before the governors, giving a preliminary report of the results of the investigations into European farm methods by the American commission which recently toured Europe.

Do Moths Like Green?
In the September Woman's Home Companion appears a department called "The Exchange," which is devoted to household necessities. One contributor writes as follows about moths and the color green:
"One of your contributors writes that moths do not like green and maintains that she has proved this by keeping moth proof a winter cloak and a fur collar in a common green cambric bag tied closely. It seems to me more probable that it was the cotton cambric that held no attraction for the pests. I know that they have no aversion to the color green for recently I was forced to burn a beautiful green cloth suit because it had become very badly moth infested."

THE TRUTH about PAINT

The value of paint can only be measured by the length of satisfactory service it gives. A building painted with Keg Lead and Oil Hand-mixed Paint or ordinary ready-mixed paint never looks well, and the results from this class of paint are never satisfactory. In a short while your property will look as if it had not been painted for years. To use cheap paint is a waste of both paint and labor. Don't waste your money on unknown, untested brands.

Remember, painting is an investment, not an expense—therefore use the paint that stood the test of time—

The Dreadful Tricks the Mirror Plays on a Fat Woman.

Grace Margaret Gould, the Fashion Editor of the Woman's Home Companion, contributes an exceedingly entertaining and sound article to the September number of that periodical. "The Deceitful Mirror" shows how some women are so intent on being stylish that the mirror is not of the slightest use to them. Although they look into the mirror, they do not see anything there except their desires. In other words, they refuse to believe the mirror. The following is her account of how some fat women regard the reflection of themselves in the mirror:

"Sometimes I think that the mirror has a special grudge against the rotund fat woman. She starts out with every intention of buying a plain simple little dress, but the saleslady announces that draperies are the correct thing, that everyone is wearing the draped skirt, and why not she?"

"So she decides to, and of course it is the fussiest of all the draped models; but she gazes at her self in the mirror with distinct joy. She knows it is the style and the mirror tells her that she is the style. Here again she only sees what she wants to see.

"In reality she is gazing at what appears to be a bundle of clothes—a movable, funny, stuffed-out bundle, but she doesn't see it, nor the fact that she looks shorter and fatter than her worst enemy could wish, and also as if she could never take another natural step in her life. But she does. She struts out of the shop with little mincing steps as if she really were the goddess of Fashion herself."

If you sit in a cool draft when you are heated and get a stiff neck or lame back, you will be looking for something that will ease the pain. Fix your mind on BALLARD'S SNOW LINIMENT and don't be talked out of it because it is the best pain relieving liniment you can get anywhere. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. #### Extensive German Maneuvers.

Berlin, Aug. 26.—As a preliminary to the most imposing and extensive German army maneuvers in years the Kaiser today held an inspection of the 5th Army Corps at Breslau. Later in the week his Majesty will inspect the 6th Army Corps at Posen. These two army corps are to form the opposing forces in the great maneuvers to be held early next month. The scene of the maneuvers will be the historic plains of Prussian Silesia. This year aeroplanes and dirigibles are to be used to a greater extent than ever before, and every available military flier in Germany will be at the disposition of the two commanders-in-chief of the opposing armies. The aeroplanes will be employed as swift dispatch bearers and for reconnoitering purposes. The dirigibles will be equipped with light wireless outfits and their principal function will be to transmit instructions from the commanders to their officers.

A Germ Exterminator.

Miracles are taking place each day in Oklahoma, the land and home of the Red Man, owing to the fact that three new herbs have been discovered scientifically compounded, and used in a common sense way. Demonstrations are now being conducted in the larger cities of Oklahoma and in a short time will be handled in all important cities of the land. No product of nature has ever sprung into such tremendous popularity in so brief a time. Numerous inquiries are pouring in regarding this new wonder. They come from people who have despaired of all earthly help. It is performing modern day miracles for the sick. It is banishing disease conditions where every other known remedy has failed. Antagonistic to all disease conditions, it attacks weakened important diseased tissues throughout the body. It instills a flow of vital force which sweeps away stomach troubles, and ailments of the liver, kidneys, bowels and blood, no matter of how long standing. It will be found most effective and not harmful and soothing to the most delicate invalids. It destroys germs of consumption, hay fever, asthma, catarrh and sore throat. In one case of tubercular laryngitis it restored the voice after ten years of affliction. All inquiries will be gladly and promptly answered.

"Oh, no!" she exclaimed, momentarily of guard. "It's—it's probably all right again by now."

"Very likely," was Mark's dry assent. "Then you don't want me to call up the manager?"

"Don't bother to do that," she faltered in confusion. "I—I might possibly have knocked out the plug—by accident."

"And you might possibly have done it on purpose," retorted Mark.

"I?" she asked, astounded. "Why should I do such a foolish thing as that?"

"That's what we're going to find out. If it had been an accident, you would have shoved the plug back into place, immediately, when we told you. Isn't that true?"

"I s'pose so," she admitted sulkily.

"Then, Miss Kelly, we are forced to believe that you deliberately refused to transmit our message."

"You can believe anything you want to," she returned spitefully. "I don't care what you believe!"

The line of questioning had thrown her off her carefully prepared line of defense. Angry, confused, she tossed aside her useless weapons and was for the instant merely a worried and much badgered little girl.

"Is it not true," repeated Robertson in measured query, "that you deliberately refused to transmit our message just now?"

"I s'pose so," she vouchsafed. "I butted in. And now I guess I've got to take my medicine."

"And," asked Mark, "do you happen to realize what that medicine is?"

"Oh, I know, all right. I'll lose my job."

"Exactly. And you don't want to lose your job, do you, Miss Kelly?"

"No, I don't. I need the money."

"I see. Quite so. You need the money. Miss Kelly, Mr. Blake has offered you a great deal of money for a certain bit of information, hasn't he?"

"Yes. But—Oh, what's the use? You can get me fired. But I guess I can find another job!"

"It may not be necessary," suggested Mark. "Miss Kelly, we don't want to harm your prospects in any way. We wish merely to show you that it is to your interest to work for us. Mr. Blake has told you how necessary it is for us to gain the information that you alone can give us. He will pay you well. We have asked you to come up here tonight to find out whether you will not accept this offer."

"Well," she inquired in weary patience, "what is it you want me to tell you?"

"We want you," replied Mark, "to tell us a number called up by Mr. Standish early this evening."

He paused for her answer. The others leaned forward.

Wanda alone was unconcerned. She was twisting the little bracelet on her wrist and eying it with new and happily absorbed interest from a dozen successive points of view.

"Miss Kelly," demanded Mark, "will you tell us that number or will you not?"

"Why," answered Wanda with a charmingly foolish smile of crass helplessness, "I really don't think I can remember it."

"I think you can," contradicted Mark. "You knew beforehand, from Mr. Blake, how much depended on it. You surely remember."

"That's so," acceded Wanda, seeming to grasp the strength of his argument as by inspiration. "I surely must. But, you see, it's against the rules to tell. Oh, gentlemen," she cried longingly, "I'd just love to help you out. Anything I could do. Anything at all. But we're not allowed to give any information like this. Oh, how I wish—I!"

"If you were allowed, then," asked Mark, "you'd do it, wouldn't you?"

"That'd be different, of course," she smiled. "But you see how I'm fixed—"

"That's too bad!" mused Mark. "Of course we can't ask you to break the company's rules. But if it were not against rules, you'd do it, would you?"

"Oh, in a second! I'd be ever so glad to; but, you see, orders are orders. And—"

"And," chimed in Mark, "luckily we knew how faithful you are to your employers. Here," taking a paper from a heap on the table, "is an order from your general manager, authorizing you to give us all the help in your power."

What Shall I do, Doctor?

What would you do—you who have no telephone?
 It isn't pleasant to think of sickness or accidents, but they do come, often when you're least prepared.

A Bell Telephone would be invaluable then—to get the doctor, QUICK, or to have the druggist rush over with a "first aid."

If you're still without this never-sleeping "watch-dog," call the Business Office and arrange for service, to-day.

Does that remove your scruples?"

For an instant she sat genuinely dumfounded. One by one her defenses were being worn away. With a great effort she strove to rally her pitiful little forces to meet the new onslaught.

"Oh, then," she broke down weakly, "I s'pose I'd better tell you."

Her surrender snapped the tension. Blake nodded grim approval. The other listeners relaxed. Even Robertson's hard mouth softened in exultation.

"That's right!" applauded Mark. "You won't be sorry for it."

"Well," asked Mark, "what was the number?"

"The number?" echoed Wanda absently.

"Was it a district number?" queried Mark, his face giving no sign of anything but desire to refresh her memory.

"Oh, yes!" cried Wanda, her eyes brightening. "A district number. Yes. I remember that it was a district number."

"What exchange?"

A further futile ransacking of the mind.

"Was it Main?"

She shook her head.

"Cleveland?"

"No-no."

"Takoma?"

"Yes! Yes! It's all come back to me now, sir. It was Takoma. That was it. Takoma. 678 Takoma!"

"678 Takoma," repeated Mark, while Van Dyke ran a searching finger down the list he held. "You are quite sure, Miss Kelly, that it was 678 Takoma?"

"Oh, yes, indeed!" Wanda assured him in eager triumph. "678 Takoma. I remember—"

"It wasn't 876 Takoma?"

"Oh, no, sir, 678."

Mark glanced at Van Dyke, who shook his head. The cross-examiner's tone grew all at once as cold as death.

"You have been playing with us long enough, Miss Kelly," said he. "I let it go on until I was certain you meant to lead us on a wild-goose chase. Now, if you please, we'll get down to business!"

"Why?" asked Wanda in marveling innocence. "Wasn't that number the right one, after all?"

"No. And you knew it was not. No such number was called from this hotel."

"Oh! Then you got the duplicate slips from central? Perhaps, if you'd let me look over them, I could—"

"Could send us on the wrong track? I have no doubt you could. No, thank you. You see, we can investigate these numbers without you. It's merely a question of investigating each of them and—"

"Then," demanded Wanda, "why did you bother to ask me?"

"To save time."

"Oh! And we've been saving time, have we, sir?"

"No," he returned with ominous calm, "we haven't. But we've found out exactly where you stand in the matter, Miss Kelly. We—"

"Then," flashed Wanda, shaking her manifold affections from her like a garment, "then you know I won't tell. And if I don't, you know you can't find out. You haven't time. You said so yourself. You've only got a few hours at most. And before you can strike another trail the Woman will be on her guard!"

Mark glowered at her in silence. Then he picked up the list that Van Dyke had just laid down.

"Many of these numbers," he said, half to himself, "can be eliminated at once. For instance, here's my own call to New York—1001 Plaza—"

"They've charged you for two calls, Mark," commented Van Dyke, glancing at the list over Robertson's shoulder. "See? Plaza 1001—twice. One directly under the other."

"Yes," said Mark, "they must have repeated it in copying the list. That makes two less for us to look up. We'll trace the number we want, sooner or later. Why won't you be sensible, Miss Kelly, and talk terms?"

"Because I don't like the work. It looks too rank for anyone but a statesman. I'm not to be bought for that kind of—"

"I see," said Mark reflectively. "Now let us get back to the other matter; to your interference with our wire."

He hesitated, leaned across to Van Dyke and whispered. Van Dyke nodded, rose and crossed to a case tiered ceiling-high with law books.

"You spoke just now, Miss Kelly," continued Robertson, "of taking your medicine. And I asked you if you knew what sort of medicine it might be."

"Don't rub it in," she snapped. "I'm going to lose my job. Let it go at that. A bunch of the nation's representative men have combined, in an all-night session, to throw a telephone operator out of work. And they've succeeded. We'll take that for granted. I'll leave you to do your celebrating of the mighty victory without me. I'm going. I congratulate you all. You've lost the Mullins bill fight. But, instead, you've won in your great fight to make me lose my job. That ought to help some. And it proves that even if you can't lick a man like Standish you're still live wires."

"One moment, Miss Kelly," intervened Mark, opening the calf-skin volume Van Dyke had just brought him from the book-shelves. "You spoke of losing your job. I'm afraid that isn't all you'll lose."

"No," she agreed, "I'll lose the blood money I could have raked in if I'd sold you the Woman's name."

"And your liberty."

"My—my—what?"

"Your liberty, Miss Kelly," repeated Mark, eying the startled girl with stormy unconcern.

"You mighty finance jugglers live so long on the razor edge of jail," she scoffed with a bravado that somehow would not ring true, "that you ought

No More Arms to be Shipped to Mexico

Washington, Aug. 26.—President Wilson will read his message on the Mexican situation to Congress today.

The message makes it plain that there will be no lifting of the embargo on arms; that no faction of government in Mexico will be allowed to receive munitions of war from the United States.

If necessary, the President proposes to increase the American border patrol to enforce this policy.

Negotiations, so far as Mr. Lind is concerned, have been terminated.

The United States will receive any further proposal through Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy of the American Embassy.

The future course of this government will be one of non-interference, in the hope that the effect of its present efforts and the pressure of foreign governments will constitute a moral suasion that ultimately will bring about peace in Mexico.

The president cites in his message, as a precedent for the policy he proposes to pursue, the action of President Hayes in withholding recognition from Diaz for more than a year after the latter had gained control of the Mexican government.

During a conference last night the President read to the Foreign Relations Committee not only the full text of his own message, but the notes exchanged between John Lind and Huerta. One of the committeemen said afterward that the Huerta note, written by Foreign Minister Gamboa, was one of the finest state papers he had ever seen.

Firm Stand on Currency Bill

Washington, Aug. 25.—The group of Representatives who have come to be known as "currency insurgents," by reason of the character of their opposition to the Administration currency bill, have been routed bag and baggage in the Democratic caucus at every point, with the result that President Wilson today won a complete victory on a vital phase of the currency bill.

Representative Henry did not offer his comprehensive amendments on corn, cotton and wheat currency, which Chairman Glass has christened "corn tassel currency," nor did Representative Ragsdale offer his amendment on warehouse receipts, but the opposition got aboard the amendment approved by the Glass committee, helped make its adoption unanimous and then claimed a victory.

This amendment was offered jointly by Representatives Kitchen of North Carolina and Harrison of Mississippi, and makes it clear that the section of the bill on rediscounting does not seek to discriminate against agricultural paper, but in the last analysis leaves to the discretion of the Federal Reserve Board the right to define and determine the character of the agricultural, industrial and commercial paper, to be rediscounted. The substitute for the second paragraph of Sec. 14, as adopted today, reads as follows:

"Upon the indorsement of any member bank, any Federal reserve bank may discount notes and bill of exchange arising out of commercial transactions; that is, notes and bills of exchange issued or drawn for agricultural, industrial or commercial purposes or the proceeds of which have been used or may be used for such purposes, the Federal Reserve Board to have the right to determine or define the character of the paper thus eligible for discount with in the meaning of this act; but such definition shall not include notes or bills issued or drawn for the purpose of carrying or trading in stocks, bonds or other investment securities, nor shall anything herein contained be construed to prohibit such notes and bills of exchange, secured by staple agricultural products or other goods, wares or merchandise from being eligible for such discount. Notes and bills admitted to discount under the terms of this paragraph must have a maturity of not more than ninety days."

E. S. Martin, city marshal of Francis has accepted a position with a cotton company and will go to McAlester the first of September to assume the duties of his position.
